Educators Favor School Proposal

Richmond, Va., Dec. 22.- Virginians were urged this week by educational leaders in the state to vote for the constitutional convention in the January 9 referendum.

Colgate W. Darden, Jr., President of the University of Virginia; Dr. Dowell J. Howard, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; members of the State Board of Education; and Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, former State Superintendent and President Emeritus of Longwood College, are among the long list of educators who view the proposed constitutional change as a helpful step toward preserving educational opportunities and avoiding enforced integregation in the public schools.

Darden, a former Governor, and also Ex-Governor John S. Battle, both of whom placed great emphasis on strengthening the public schools during their terms in the Executive Mansion, endorsed the plan to amend the constitution so that tuition grants can be made to parents who object to sending their children to mixed schools.

Dr. Howard and members of the State Board of Education approved the program, and Dr. Lancaster took over December 12 as Director of the State Referendum Information Center, which is functioning on a statewide basis as a clearinghouse of information on the January 9 referendum. Thomas C. Boushall, of Richmond, a member of the State Board of Education and President of the Bank of Virginia, heads a commitee which is raising funds by voluntary contribution throughout the state.

Another prominent educator, Dr. Walter S. Newman, President of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and former Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction, is serving as a member of the State Referendum Information Center's Advisory Committee. Other members are Governor Battle, Chairman; State Senator S. Floyd Landreth, of Galex, who is Chairman of the Republican Party in Virginia; and State Senator Thomas H. Blanton, of Bowling Green, who is State Democratic Chairman.

Many division superintendents of schools, school boards, and local governing bodies also have formally endorsed the proposed amendment and urged a "for the convention" vote on January 9.

Here is what some of the educators have to say on the subject:

Dr. Howard: "The question before the people of Virginia at the moment is —shall there be a Convention to revise and amend Section 141 of the Constitution of Virginia. The bill making this possible was recommended by a Commission of 32 members of the General Assembly representing all sections of Virginia, presented by Governor Stanley, and voted upon favorably by an overwhelming majority of membership of both the House and Senate.

"A revision and amendment to Section 141 of the Virginia Constitution will permit a continuation of a graduated aid program for negroes, the war orphans program, rehabilitation program for disabled persons, and the teachers scholarship program. In other words, a right to operate porgrams we thought in good faith we have had the right to operate for 26 years. It will make tuition grants permissable, not mandatory. It deals with no other type of legislation.

"It does not contemplate the establishment of a system of private schools. It simply authorizes tuition payments to parents of both races who desire rather than send their child to an integrated school to send the child to an available private nonsectarian school. The proposed amendment in reality is more restrictive than the present Section 141, as it had been interpreted during the past 26 years.

"The discussion on the floor of both Houses manifested a grave concern for the public schools of Virginia and a widespread assurance that the step being taken was for the best interest of the public schools, taking into consideration the extremely critical areas.

"My approximate ten years experience with the General Assembly of Virginia has given me increasing faith in the integrity and ability of the membership. I can honestly state that it is my firm conviction that the present membership is the most friendly toward public education of any in my ten years experience. I place my confidence in them and the people of Virginia whom they represent in the enactment of legislation following the referendum in keeping with the best interests of public education and in the best interest of negro and white alike. To this purpose I dedicate my best efforts."

Former Governor Darden: "The preservation of the public school system is of first importance to the people of Virginia — to both races alike. It is the one means whereby we can lift the intellectual level of the people of our state.

"The adoption of the Constitutional amendment sugested by the Gray Commission and approved overwhelmingly by the General Assembly offers us both the means and the time to affect the changes that the Supreme Court Decision has forced upon us.

"We must preserve our public school system and we should provide against forced integration.

"Both can be done, I believe, with the Constitutional change proposed and the people should vote for the Constitutional Convention."

Dr. Lancaster: "Having devoted my entire life to the cause of education—the greater part to public education—I would not advocate any action that would damage Virginia's public school system.

"The proposals of the Gray Commission are not designed to undermine the public schools. These proposals are designed to provide ways and means of offering some educational opportunities to white and to colored pupils in those sections of the state that will be for a time without such opportunities unless these proposals are enacted into law. The first step in this direction is a favorable vote on the proposed amendment to Section 141 of the Constitution on January 9, 1956."

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of our dear son, Benny Gallier, who departed this life four years ago, December 25, 1951.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the gentle flowers wave,
Lies the one we love so truly,
In his lonely, silent grave.

Our hearts still ache with sorrow,
Our eyes shed many tears,
God only knows how we miss him,
At the end of these sad years.

It's lonesome here without him,
And sad the weary way;
And life has not been the same to us
Since God took him away.

We think of him in silence,
And we often call his dear name;
There is nothing left to answer,
But his darling picture in the frame.

Our dear one has gone, but not forgotten,
Never shall his memory fade;
Sweetest thoughts forever linger,
Around the grave where he is laid.

He shall sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn,
On that resurrection morn.

—Sadly missed by his Mother, Father, Brothers and Sisters.

Disease Burden Is Many Things

Every flock carries a disease burden. It is the amount of disease, seen and unseen, in that flock. Disease burden is reflected in the growth and production of a flock, as well as in the severity of its diseases.

What is your disease burden is your flock carrying? It varies, of course, from time to time.

In general, if your flock is producing at a high rate and if it continues to produce as it should (according to inherited capacity), its disease burden is low.

High Disease Level

If the flock is laying at a mediocre rate and if it suffers repeated or persistent disease outbreaks, then its disease level is high.

Some of the disease conditions that often occur in flocks of high disease level are bluecomb, nonspecific enteritis, CRD, intestinal coccidiosis, worms, even chicken blackhead.

One disease may bring on others. Because of its condition, the bird is more susceptible. This may result in loss by two or more diseases at the same time.

Stress Factors

An unfavorable environment often the result of poor management practices . . . places stress on the flock, making it difficult for birds to endure disease burdens without breaking down.

Stresses may include dampness, litter, insufficient waterers and feeders, lack of air, lack of sunlight, conditions tending to excite the spread of unseen infections, and contamination.

Worms and Coccidiosis

One of the commonest and most destructive stressors is worms. These parasites develop to a burdensome level in a very short while without being noticed. Regular worming treatments are an aid in reducing disease burden.

The same is true of coccidiosis. It may not be noticed, but it can cause serious damage to the flock. Use a coccidiosis treatment to control the disease.

In short, do everything you can to lighten your flock's disease burden and brighten your chances for profits.

Local Fireman Answer Three Alarms in Week

The Appomattox volunteer firemen were called out three times during the past week. Saturday night there were called to answer an alarm from the residence of Russell Mann. Some personal property burned and there was some damage to the dwelling, but the firemen did an excellent job in holding down the loss and saving the building.

Tuesday morning, the firemen were called to the local Western Auto store on Main St., when the store was found to be filled with smoke when opened at 8 o'clock. Donning masks, the firemen went into the building and corrected the trouble in a stove, and the store was doing business as usual shortly later.

Yesterday afternoon the firemen were called to the residence of A. A. Babcock, and climbed to the roof to handle a chimney fire.

All three of these alarms resulted in prompt and effective work by the firemen.

COLLEGE PURCHASES HOME FOR DORMITORY

Farmville, Dec. 21.- Longwood College has purchased the Sanford home on the west edge of the campus for use as a small dormitory during the 1956-57 session, President Francis G. Lankford, Jr. announced today.

Longwood has requested appropriations for a new dormitory to house 200 students, but provided the General Assembly appropriates the money, the new building will not be ready for occupancy before the 1957-58 session.

The present enrollment at Longwood, primarily a teachers college, is 793, an increase of 15 per cent over the enrollment of 689 during the first semester of the 1954-55 session. The enrollment is expected to go up an equal amount next year.

The Sanford House at 507 High Street has been purchased for $13,000 and after it has been converted to dormitory use, it will house 15 students.

PINE SEEDLINGS

Although the tree planting season has just gotten underway, orders now on hand for seedlings have drastically reduced the number that will be available for work this spring. Information reaching the County Agent's Office here indicates that there are less than one million loblolly pine seedlings still avaiabe to farmers in this section of the state. Those farmers who have panned to make plantings should file an order at a very early date if they expect to get seedlings for 1955-56 planting year. Order blanks may be secured from the Ve-Ag Instructors, the Soil Conservation Service, Forestry Service or County Agent's Office.

COMMENT ON SPORTS

By Pete Fritchie

Washington, Dec. 21.- The bowl games are not far away, and since most of the discussion has been on what will probably be the No. 1 game of New Year's Day, . . . the Orange Bowl set-to . . it's time to talk about the Rose Bowl a bit.

U. C. L. A. meets Michigan State in this one. The Rose Bowl for many years featured the game most sportswriters thought was the number one in the country. They are now tied to the Big Ten Conference and while the original major bowl always has a fine game, its offerings these days are not necessarily the top game of New Year's Day.

This year, for example, both Rose Bowl teams have been beaten. Michigan knocked off Michigan State, 14-7, and Maryland whipped UCLA, 7-0. But these two teams are among the strongest in the country. They are probably more potent than any other twosome in a bowl affair this year, with the exception of Oklahoma and Maryland.

Michigan State, in our opinion, is as strong as any team in the country on the usual Saturday afternoon. The Spartans would have given either Maryland or Oklahoma plenty of football. In addition, they come from the Big Ten, a league of tough competition—tougher than the average competition found in the Pacific Coast league.

UCLA is plenty strong. They gave Maryland a rough battle. They beat a good Southern Cal, which then trounced Notre Dame, 42-20. They finished strong. But in all fairness to UCLA, their schedule wasn't as tough as Michigan State's. For that reason, and others, we must string along with Michigan State.

Dan River HS Beaten 51-49 By Appomattox

Appomattox High School ran its unbeaten string in basketball to six games here Monday night when the Blue Hornets held off a rally in the final moments by the Dan River High School for a 51 to 49 victory.

A. H. S. really won at the foul line, sinking two more free throws than Dan River.

It was the first defeat in District Four, Group II play for the Dan River team

Appomattox forged to the front in third period, when the Hornets tallied 17 points while holding the visitors to 10. Dan River came back strong in the last period, but the local team held to its narrow margin to come off with its most impressive victory of the season.

Robert Carter, at forward, led the winners, with 15 points. Bradley Babcock had 10 points.

A. H. S. will play an Alumni team here Jan. 3.
